

STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES

Jeb Bush*Former Florida GovernorNewt GingrichAmerican Solutions for Winning the FutureGrover NorquistAmericans for Tax ReformEdwin Meese IIIFormer U.S. Attorney GeneralWilliam J. BennettFormer Secretary of Education and Federal "Drug Czar"Asa HutchinsonFormer U.S. Attorney and Administrator of the U.S. Drug Enforcement AdministrationJ.C. WattsFormer Member of the U.S. House of Representatives for Oklahoma's 4th Congressional DistrictRichard DoranFormer Florida Attorney GeneralAllan BenseFormer Speaker of the Florida HouseTom SladeFormer Chairman of the Florida Republican PartyDominic M. CalabroFlorida TaxWatchJ. Robert McClure IIIJames Madison Institute (FL)Allison DeFoorFormer Monroe County SheriffBarney BishopFormer President and CEO of Associated Industries of FloridaVicki L. LukisFormer Chair of Gov. Jeb Bush's Ex-Offender Task ForceHenry JuszkieviczCEO of Gibson GuitarPat NolanJustice FellowshipDavid KeeneFormer Chairman of the American Conservative UnionRichard ViguerieConservativeHQ.comChuck Colson (1931-2012)Prison Fellowship MinistriesBrooke RollinsTexas Public Policy FoundationPaul GessingRio Grande Foundation (NM)Tony PerkinsFamily Research CouncilGeorge LiebmannCalvert Institute for Policy Research, Inc. (MD)Rabbi Daniel LapinAmerican Alliance of Jews and ChristiansList of signatories continues on page two.*

As members of the nation's conservative movement, we strongly support constitutionally limited government, transparency, individual liberty, personal responsibility, and free enterprise. We believe public safety is a core responsibility of government because the establishment of a well-functioning criminal justice system enforces order and respect for every person's right to property and life, and ensures that liberty does not lead to license.

Conservatives correctly insist that government services be evaluated on whether they produce the best possible results at the lowest possible cost, but too often this lens of accountability has not focused as much on public safety policies as other areas of government. As such, corrections spending has expanded to become the second fastest growing area of state budgets—trailing only Medicaid.

Conservatives are known for being tough on crime, but we must also be tough on criminal justice spending. That means demanding more cost-effective approaches that enhance public safety. A clear example is our reliance on prisons, which serve a critical role by incapacitating dangerous offenders and career criminals but are not the solution for every type of offender. And in some instances, they have the unintended consequence of hardening nonviolent, low-risk offenders—making them a greater risk to the public than when they entered.

Applying the following conservative principles to criminal justice policy is vital to achieving a cost-effective system that protects citizens, restores victims, and reforms wrongdoers.

1. As with any government program, the criminal justice system must be transparent and include performance measures that hold it accountable for its results in protecting the public, lowering crime rates, reducing re-offending, collecting victim restitution and conserving taxpayers' money.
2. Crime victims, along with the public and taxpayers, are among the key "consumers" of the criminal justice system; the victim's conception of justice, public safety, and the offender's risk for future criminal conduct should be prioritized when determining an appropriate punishment.
3. The corrections system should emphasize public safety, personal responsibility, work, restitution, community service, and

Kelly McCutchen*Georgia Public Policy FoundationPenny NanceConcerned Women for AmericaWard ConnerlyAmerican Civil Rights Institute & former
Regent of University of CaliforniaBob WilliamsState Budget SolutionsKevin KanePelican Institute for Public Policy (LA)John J. DiIulio, Jr.University of PennsylvaniaMatt MayerBuckeye Institute for Public Policy
Solutions (OH)Viet DinhGeorgetown University Law Center &
former U.S. Assistant Attorney GeneralJohn McCollisterPlatte Institute (NE)Michael CarnuccioOklahoma Council of Public AffairsRonald F. ScheberleAmerican Legislative Exchange CouncilEli LehrerR Street InstituteDavid BartonWallBuildersMatthew J. BrouilletteCommonwealth Foundation (PA)George KellingManhattan InstituteForest ThigpenMississippi Center for Public PolicyJohn HoodJohn Locke Foundation (NC)Craig LadwigIndiana Policy Review FoundationDeborah DanielsFormer U.S. Assistant Attorney General, Office of Justice ProgramsDonna ArduinArduin, Laffer & MooreRalph ReedFaith and Freedom CoalitionLarry ThompsonFormer U.S. Deputy Attorney GeneralJoe WhitleyFormer Acting U.S. Associate Attorney
General and U.S. AttorneyJon CaldaraIndependence InstituteCraig DeRocheFormer Speaker of the Michigan House of treatment—both in probation and parole, which supervise most offenders, and in prisons.
RepresentativesB. Wayne Hughes, Jr.Businessman and PhilanthropistMike ThompsonThomas Jefferson Institute of Public Policy*

4. An ideal criminal justice system works to reform amenable offenders who will return to society through harnessing the power of families, charities, faith-based groups, and communities.
5. Because incentives affect human behavior, policies for both offenders and the corrections system must align incentives with our goals of public safety, victim restitution and satisfaction, and cost-effectiveness, thereby moving from a system that grows when it fails to one that rewards results.
6. Criminal law should be reserved for conduct that is either blameworthy or threatens public safety, not wielded to grow government and undermine economic freedom.

These principles are grounded in time-tested conservative truths—constitutionally limited government, transparency, individual liberty, personal responsibility, free enterprise, and the centrality of the family and community. All of these are critical to addressing today's criminal justice challenges. It is time to apply these principles to the task of delivering a better return on taxpayers' investments in public safety. Our security, prosperity, and freedom depend on it.

About Us

Right on Crime is a national initiative led by the Texas Public Policy Foundation, one of the nation's leading state-based conservative think tanks. The initiative aims to raise awareness of the truly conservative position on criminal justice policy by demonstrating the growing support for effective criminal justice reforms within the conservative movement. This initiative will share research and policy ideas, mobilize conservative leaders, and work to raise public awareness.

Right on Crime couldn't be timelier. With new majorities in 19 state legislatures and hundreds of new lawmakers who pledged to cut spending now taking office, Right on Crime provides conservative principled solutions that are proven to reduce crime, lower costs and restore victims. For more information, please visit www.rightoncrime.com.